Storyboards

When I drew out the first storyboard I was only focused on the rider and their interaction with the app because I figured that the most important part of the app was being able to search for rides. After some peer feedback it was made clear that my second storyboard should be about the drivers that interact with the app since this is the second main feature of the app. One of the most helpful pieces of feedback I recieved was about implementing notifications for drivers when spots in their car get reserved - I thought this was a great addition that I hadn't yet thought of.